Agency, Entrepreneurship and Employment:
Learning from each other about and from migrants

Thuringia (Germany)

23 Sept. 2022: Excursion/ Field visit to Beulwitzer Quartier

Welcoming initiatives can contribute to the further development of shrinking areas while also offering space for the successful social inclusion of non-EU migrants in line with the Sustainable Development Goals ('leaving no one behind'). Often welcoming initiatives are run by cooperating actors from different societal fields, and their actions and impact depend on the local contexts.

Despite a lot of creative energy and good examples of welcoming culture, the welcome initiatives are experiencing growing challenges, but there are also encouraging practical experiences. This roundtable places v. That is why we bring together actors of the welcoming initiatives in Thuringia and Rhineland-Palatinate, besides sharing international experiences from Italy, Netherlands, Poland and Spain. The roundtable is organized in the framework of the international comparative and EU-funded research project 'Welcoming Spaces in Europe' (www.welcomingspaces.eu).

Background of Roundtable

The arrival of migrants from 2015 onwards was well managed in that migrants were directed to destinations, accommodated in houses and received other welfare policies. However, the work does not end there, as migration is a non-stop process, and sustainable (long-lasting) social inclusion requires more than the first assistance measures. New migrants are continuing to arrive. Every new war or major event can trigger a new important flow, as was the case with the Ukrainian conflict.

Continuing the efforts for effective social inclusion of migrants, enabling them to be agents of their successful emplacement and participants in the local revitalisation is a challenge every political actor, policymaker and social agent is confronted with.

Therefore, this roundtable understands that sustainable inclusion goes far beyond the first welcoming assistance, and it aims to discuss the challenges the political actors, policymakers, social welfare agents and the migrants themselves face in rebuilding their lives in a new environment aiming at long-time stay. For this reason, the participation of these actors at this roundtable is essential so that they can contribute and receive insights on how to make migrants an integral part of the strategies for demographic and economic revitalisation.

Objectives of the Roundtable

The event aims at bringing together politicians, city councillors, public administrators responsible for migration inclusion, social policy workers and development planners at the local, district and state levels, as well as migrants, international researchers, and practitioners from social organisations/NGOs to share experiences, ideas and receive new insights related to the sustainable (long-term) inclusion of migrants and the development of their territories. The underlying question is: What entails sustainable migrant inclusion?

Objectives of the roundtable:

1. Promote continuous network development with the encouragement of discussions and cooperation among actors from different political levels and various interest groups.
2. Share local, state, national and international experiences on inspiring projects that offer solutions to the successful inclusion of migrants, especially related to employability and entrepreneurship.

3. Share the challenges faced in implementing migrant inclusion policies, especially the ones that are intended to foster employment and entrepreneurship among migrants.
4. Raise awareness of the diversity of the migrant population and their potential for further development of shrinking regions.
5. Exert political influence to place the topic of participation of migrants on the political agenda at all levels, promote awareness of the current populism and discuss instruments to overcome xenophobia.
